The condominium gleams and glows like a faceted jewel. Rich in exotic woods, it is 3,100 square feet of riveting design. Lustrous textures abound, counterpointing maple wood inlaid floors, while color tones ranging from light beige to deep chocolate keep the emphasis on architectural detailing.

Located in Residence du Cap, Williams Island's premier building, the apartment pours forth from its private elevator foyer into what appears to be a fan-shaped Great Room. In the foyer, the honey-colored floor is imbedded with an earth-toned slate, hinting of more texture to come, while classic wood columns express the architectural detailing. An Art Deco-inspired bench, carved-leg credenza and bold multi-canvas painting are elements that welcome the fortunate visitor.

RIGHT: Utilizing a color palette from soft beiges to chocolate with a mix of natural materials, the designers created an environment that focused on the views and architectural detailing in the living room area.
